COMMENTS: At their public meeting of February 1, 2001, the Historic Preservation Commission (HPC) recommended that the White Dairy Barn (Murphy's Irish Pub) located at 1810 East Apache Boulevard be designated as a Tempe Historic Property. The White Dairy Barn is the only known river cobble building remaining in Tempe, and was built around 1918 to 1920 by E.M. White after he bought the property from M.H. Meyer and J.H. Guyer. White came to Arizona from California in 1908 and farmed near Phoenix before moving to Tempe to permit his children to attend the Tempe Normal School. He used the property as a dairy farm until 1927 when it was subdivided into acre tracts for sale. White is best known for the larger river cobble house he built just across the river from downtown Tempe, which was demolished in the 1980's.

The White Dairy Barn was converted to a commercial establishment (Murphy's Irish Pub) after 1930. The building is in a good state of preservation and retains most of its original exterior design features. The White Dairy Barn is a square, single-story building featuring a stepped parapet with concrete parapet copings and a concrete pediment at the roofline. Concrete columns at regular intervals provide support for the building. Intervals between the columns are filled with courses of river cobbles. The entire building is now painted white.

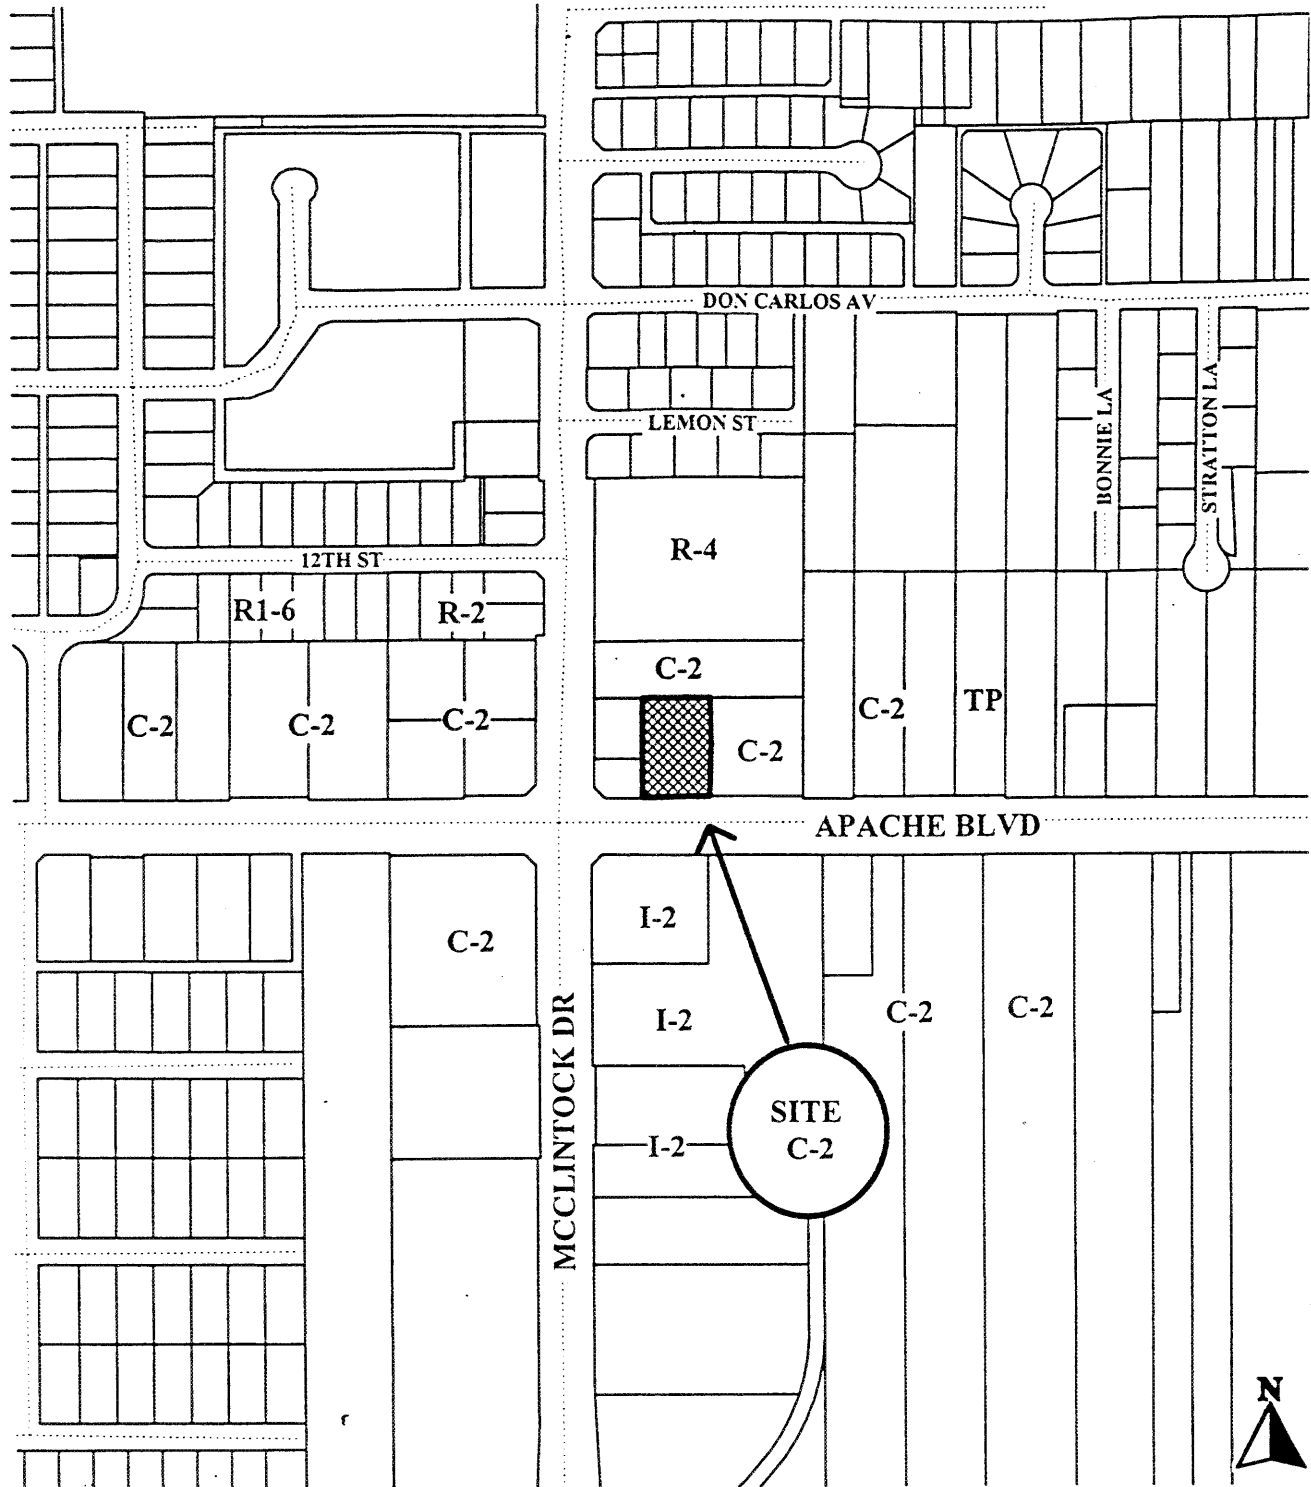

The front façade has been altered with the addition of signage and a canopy over the main entry. Two large glass block windows have been added to the front façade, one on either side of the entry. Two additions at the rear of the building have stepped parapets and plastered walls painted white. Major original design features, such as the parapet, exposed concrete columns, door framing, and cobble surfaces have been preserved. The building is a rare example of innovative owner-built architecture using locally indigenous materials.

Per the process described in Chapter 14A of the Tempe City Code (the Historic Preservation Ordinance), once approved by the Historic Preservation Commission, an application for designation must be heard by the Planning and Zoning Commission and, if approved there, heard by the City Council. If approved by Council, the effect of designation is that “historic” overlay zoning will be applied to the entire subject property. While this does not change the underlying zoning or General Plan category, it does subject the designated property to the additional requirements as set forth in the Historic Preservation Ordinance.

RECOMMENDATION: Staff – Approval of designation
HPC – Approval of designation
Commission – Approval of designation

Background/Status

The White Dairy Barn (Murphy's Irish Pub) property owner, Donald C. Hoots of Hoots Family Investments L.P., submitted an application for designation to the Tempe Historic Property Register on 11 January 2001. This submittal was in response to staff's recent notification of proposed "Historic Eligible" (HE) property classification and request for nomination for formal designation.

The White Dairy Barn (Murphy's Irish Pub) is identified in the Tempe Multiple Resource Area Update (MRA) survey (#201) and is currently listed on the National Register of Historic Places (NRDate, 10 October 1984).

History/Context

The White Dairy Barn is the only known river cobble building remaining in Tempe, and was built around 1918 to 1920 by E.M. White after he bought the property from M.H. Meyer and J.H. Guyer. White came to Arizona from California in 1908 and farmed near Phoenix before moving to Tempe to permit his children to attend the Tempe Normal School. He used the property in Section 14 as a dairy farm until 1927 when it was subdivided into acre tracts for sale. White is best known for the larger river cobble house he built just across the river from downtown Tempe, which was demolished in the 1980s. The White House bore many similarities in design and construction to the Dairy Barn.

Architecture

The White Dairy Barn was converted to a commercial establishment (now Murphy's Irish Pub) after 1930. The building is in a good state of preservation and retains most of its original exterior design features. The White Dairy Barn is a square, single-story building featuring a stepped parapet with concrete parapet copings and a concrete pediment at the roofline. Concrete columns at regular intervals provide support for the building. Intervals between the columns are filled with courses of river cobbles. The entire building is now painted white.

The front façade has been altered with the addition of signage and a canopy over the main entry. Two large glass block windows have been added to the front façade, one on either side of the entry. Two additions at the rear of the building have stepped parapets and plastered walls painted white. The building is in good condition. Major original design features, such as the parapet, exposed concrete columns, door framing, and cobble surfaces have been preserved. The building is a rare example of innovative owner-built architecture using locally indigenous materials, and is worthy of preservation.

Significance

The subject property appears to meet the following criteria for designation, as found in section 14A-4 (a) of the Tempe City Code.

1. It meets the criteria listing on the Arizona or National Register of Historic Places;
- 2a. It is found to be of exceptional significance and expresses a distinctive character, resulting from:
 - A significant portion of it is at least 50 years old
 - It is reflective of the city's cultural, social, political or event significant in local, state or national history.

Recommendation(s)

Historic Preservation staff recommends that the Historic Preservation Commission approve the nomination and recommend to the Planning and Zoning Commission and City Council that the White Dairy Barn (Murphy's Irish Pub) be designated as a Tempe Historic Property (#19).

Note: Per Chapter 14-A of the Tempe City Code, the application, if approved by HPC, will be forwarded to the Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) for public hearing and action.

Re: HPO-2001.10: Historic Property Designation of White ^{DAIRY} Dairy Barn (Murphy's Irish Pub)

At their public hearing of Thursday, 1 February 2001, the Historic Preservation Commission (HPC) voted 5-0 to approve this application as presented and discussed with a recommendation to the Planning & Zoning Commission and City Council that the above-referenced property be designated as Tempe Historic Property #19.

See attached staff report to the HPC, plus supporting materials (attached) for additional information.

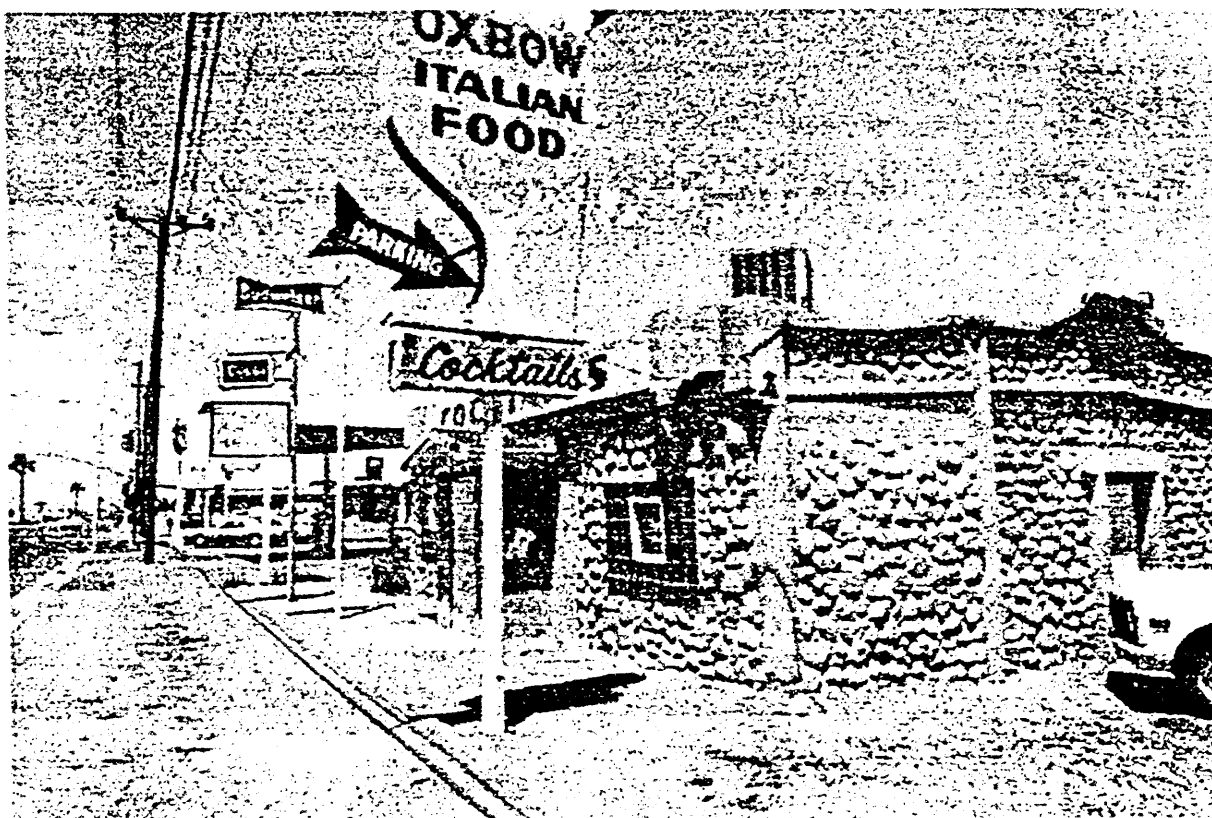

- Notes:
1. Per Chapter 14A "Historic Preservation" of the Tempe City Code, once an application has been approved by the HPC, it must also be approved in public hearings by the Planning & Zoning Commission and the City Council. Please schedule a public hearing to consider this item on your next available agenda.
 2. Designation does not change the underlying zoning of a property, however, it does result in the application of Historic "H" overlay zoning and the associated requirements of Chapter 14A of the City Code.
